Barlow Respiratory Hospital is the only non-profit long-term care hospital (LTCH) in Los Angeles.

We focus on serving medically complex patients with multiple medical problems, with a focus on chronically critically ill patients dependent on a ventilator to take their next breath.

Patients are transferred to Barlow Respiratory Hospital from an intensive or critical care unit when they need a longer acute hospital stay to improve and progress to the next level of care or return home.

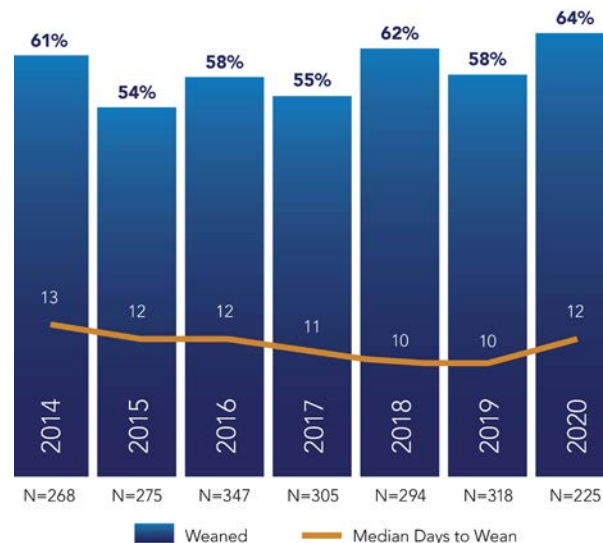

Founded in 1902, we have a history of quality respiratory care.

WHAT IS AN LTCH?

Long-term care hospitals (LTCHs) also known as long-term acute care (LTAC) hospitals serve patients with complex medical needs who require longer hospital stays and need highly specialized care.

Our expert interdisciplinary teams include board certified physicians, registered nurses and licensed therapists. We work together to provide each patient and their family individualized goals of care and a treatment and discharge plan to achieve the most complete recovery possible.

WEANING SUCCESS RATE

ESTABLISHED EXPERTISE

Barlow Respiratory Hospital admits and treats more than twice the national percentage of mechanically ventilated patients discharged from LTCHs. Our expertise in treating ventilator-dependent patients includes our published TIPS® weaning protocol. The expert skill and care provided by our teams helps patients and their families through the prolonged process of recovery from critical illness and establishes a discharge plan to progress to the next level of care. As an LTCH, Barlow Respiratory Hospital is an essential step in the continuum of care from the ICU through treatment, rehabilitation and recovery.

OUR PROGRAMS AND EXPERTISE INCLUDE:

- Ventilator Weaning
- Care for the Medically Complex Patient
- Respiratory Care
